

Bachelor of Community Rehabilitation

CRDS scholars ask questions such as: how can disabled people and their families participate fully in their communities? How can stigmatization and stereotyping of disabled people be prevented? What are the barriers to a good life for disabled people, and how can they be removed? How can society make the lives of disabled people better? Community Rehabilitation and Disability Studies examines the economic, social and political forces that marginalize people in order to empower disabled people and their communities.

A Bachelor of Community Rehabilitation can provide a stepping stone towards a Master of Disability and Community Studies (MDCS), Master of Science (MSc), or a Doctoral degree (PhD).

The degree can also lead to further learning for careers in teaching, post-secondary instruction, guidance counselling, learning resources or special education, and disability, behavioural or career consulting.
